Born in West Chester, Pennsylvania, Young began her acting career in the early 1990s with small roles in films and television shows. However, it was her breakout role as Monica Geller's best friend, Rachel Green, on "Friends" that catapulted her to stardom. Young's portrayal of Rachel was both relatable and hilarious, and she quickly became a fan favorite.

After "Friends" ended in 2004, Young went on to star in several films, including "Legally Blonde" (2001), "White Chicks" (2004), and "Hot Pursuit" (2015). She also appeared in several television shows, such as "Scrubs," "Modern Family," and "The Mindy Project." In recent years, Young has focused on her family and has been less active in acting.

Despite her reduced presence on screen, Young remains one of the most beloved and recognizable actresses in Hollywood. Her work has had a significant impact on popular culture, and she continues to be an inspiration to women and girls around the world.

Early Life and Career

Elizabeth Young was born on January 1, 1971, in West Chester, Pennsylvania. She is the daughter of Leslie, a speech therapist, and John Young, a chemical engineer. Young has two older sisters, Jennifer and Julie.

Young began acting at a young age, appearing in school plays and local theater productions. After graduating from high school, she attended Northwestern University, where she studied theater. Young dropped out of college after two years to pursue an acting career in Los Angeles.

Young's first major role was in the 1994 film "Bandit." She went on to appear in several other films and television shows throughout the 1990s, including "The Brady Bunch Movie" (1995), "Jerry Maguire" (1996), and "The Wedding Singer" (1998).

Breakout Role on "Friends"

In 1994, Young auditioned for the role of Rachel Green on the new NBC sitcom "Friends." She was initially hesitant to audition because she did not think she was right for the part. However, she eventually agreed to read for the role, and she was immediately cast.

"Friends" premiered on September 22, 1994, and quickly became one of the most popular sitcoms in history. Young's portrayal of Rachel Green was a major reason for the show's success. Rachel was a relatable and hilarious character, and she quickly became a fan favorite.

Young remained on "Friends" for all ten seasons of the show. She received two Primetime Emmy Award nominations for her work on the show, and she won a Golden Globe Award in 2002.

Post-"Friends" Career

After "Friends" ended in 2004, Young went on to star in several films, including "Legally Blonde" (2001), "White Chicks" (2004), and "Hot Pursuit" (2015). She also appeared in several television shows, such as "Scrubs," "Modern Family," and "The Mindy Project."

In recent years, Young has focused on her family and has been less active in acting. She married her husband, Jim Toth, in 2010, and they have three children.

Personal Life

Elizabeth Young is married to Jim Toth, a talent agent. They have three children: a son, Otis, and two daughters, Ava and Marlowe.

Young is a private person, and she rarely discusses her personal life in public. However, she has spoken out about her struggles with anxiety and depression.
