Правила игры

Forced Bet Poker is played with a standard deck of 52 cards. The game is played with two or more players. Each player is dealt two cards face down. The player to the left of the dealer starts the betting by making a forced bet, which is typically a small amount of money. The other players then have the option to call the bet, raise the bet, or fold. If a player calls the bet, they are matching the amount of the forced bet. If a player raises the bet, they are betting more money than the forced bet. If a player folds, they are dropping out of the hand and forfeiting their bet.

After the first round of betting, the dealer deals a third card face up in the middle of the table. This card is called the "flop". The players then have another round of betting. After the second round of betting, the dealer deals a fourth card face up in the middle of the table, which is called the "turn". The players then have another round of betting. After the third round of betting, the dealer deals a fifth and final card face up in the middle of the table, which is called the "river". The players then have one final round of betting.

After the final round of betting, the players reveal their hands. The player with the best hand wins the pot.
