Allen, who hails from the town of Kilkenny, Ireland, has been playing traditional Irish music since she was a child. She began writing her own songs in her late teens, and her music has been described as a blend of traditional Irish folk and Americana. Her songs are often deeply personal, drawing on her own experiences of love, loss, and heartbreak.

Kilkenny Rose Moonshine was recorded in Nashville, Tennessee, with a group of top-notch musicians, including banjo player Noam Pikelny, fiddler Stuart Duncan, and guitarist Bryan Sutton. The album was produced by Grammy Award-winning producer Gary Paczosa.

The album's title track, "Kilkenny Rose Moonshine," is a haunting ballad about a young woman who leaves her home in Ireland to seek her fortune in America. The song is a reflection of Allen's own journey as a musician, and it captures the bittersweet feeling of leaving home to pursue one's dreams.

Other highlights of the album include the upbeat bluegrass tune "The Parting Glass," the heart-wrenching ballad "I Will Not Forget You," and the rousing instrumental "The Sally Gardens." Allen's songwriting is consistently strong throughout the album, and her voice is a thing of beauty.

Kilkenny Rose Moonshine is a stunning debut album from a rising star. June Allen is a gifted songwriter and performer, and her music is sure to touch the hearts of listeners of all ages.

The album is available for pre-order now, and it will be released on Friday, March 17th.
